

THANK YOU NOTES

Stories of Connectional Giving

www.iaumc.org/tyn

SHARED UNITED METHODIST MINISTRIES, BURLINGTON

Aristotle is often quoted as saying that the whole is greater than the sum of its parts. Congregations in the Burlington area are discovering the truth of that statement in their ministry action team called SUMM, Shared United Methodist Ministries.

SUMM grew out of years of collaboration by the pastors in the area, who, among other things, have coordinated an annual series of Lenten services. Ed Kail, our apportionment dollars at work as the Field Outreach Minister in the Southwest District, came to Burlington in 2008 to encourage the development of a ministry action team and SUMM is the result.

Kathy Moore from the West Hill United Methodist Church met a mother and her three children at one of their first End of the Month Meals. The mother got winter clothes for the children but was hesitant at first to get anything for herself. Kathy stepped forward to hold her toddler, and – with some further insistence – the mother found a coat and hat that she could wear. “I was grateful for a chance to help,” Kathy noted later. “Even if that one mother and her children would have been the only family we had helped, all of our effort would have been worth every minute.”

Other SUMM activities include the Bible Bee pictured at the left. Visit www.summinfo.org for more details.

THANK YOU NOTES

Stories of Connectional Giving

www.iaumc.org/tyn

SHARED UNITED METHODIST MINISTRIES, BURLINGTON

Aristotle is often quoted as saying that the whole is greater than the sum of its parts. Congregations in the Burlington area are discovering the truth of that statement in their ministry action team called SUMM, Shared United Methodist Ministries.

SUMM grew out of years of collaboration by the pastors in the area, who, among other things, have coordinated an annual series of Lenten services. Ed Kail, our apportionment dollars at work as the Field Outreach Minister in the Southwest District, came to Burlington in 2008 to encourage the development of a ministry action team and SUMM is the result.

Kathy Moore from the West Hill United Methodist Church met a mother and her three children at one of their first End of the Month Meals. The mother got winter clothes for the children but was hesitant at first to get anything for herself. Kathy stepped forward to hold her toddler, and – with some further insistence – the mother found a coat and hat that she could wear. “I was grateful for a chance to help,” Kathy noted later. “Even if that one mother and her children would have been the only family we had helped, all of our effort would have been worth every minute.”

Other SUMM activities include the Bible Bee pictured at the left. Visit www.summinfo.org for more details.

