

THANK YOU NOTES

Stories of Connectional Giving

www.iaumc.org/tyn

Flood Relief Outreach near Farragut

The Farragut United Methodist Church is helping to provide evening meals at the Waubonsie State Park campground for persons who have been displaced by the flooding. As the Missouri River burst out of its banks this summer, area residents came to the campground for refuge, but the stress of long-term camping has begun to take the joy out of a perpetual diet of hamburgers and hot dogs.

Members of the church have been cooperating with others in the area to provide home-cooked meals. They are uniting their efforts in shared ministry following the example of Christ, when he said to the disciples in Matthew 14:16, "You give them something to eat."

The evening meals are being offered every other Wednesday from July 13 through September 21 — a welcomed distraction from ongoing concerns about the flooding. Church members have been reunited with former acquaintances and made new friends. They have come with a servant spirit as compassionate listeners, providing meals like fried chicken, sweet corn, and watermelon.

Learn more about relief efforts in the Southwest District from Vicki Wedemeyer by calling 712.249.6703 or emailing lwedem@hotmail.com.

THANK YOU NOTES

Stories of Connectional Giving

www.iaumc.org/tyn

Flood Relief Outreach near Farragut

The Farragut United Methodist Church is helping to provide evening meals at the Waubonsie State Park campground for persons who have been displaced by the flooding. As the Missouri River burst out of its banks this summer, area residents came to the campground for refuge, but the stress of long-term camping has begun to take the joy out of a perpetual diet of hamburgers and hot dogs.

Members of the church have been cooperating with others in the area to provide home-cooked meals. They are uniting their efforts in shared ministry following the example of Christ, when he said to the disciples in Matthew 14:16, "You give them something to eat."

The evening meals are being offered every other Wednesday from July 13 through September 21 — a welcomed distraction from ongoing concerns about the flooding. Church members have been reunited with former acquaintances and made new friends. They have come with a servant spirit as compassionate listeners, providing meals like fried chicken, sweet corn, and watermelon.

Learn more about relief efforts in the Southwest District from Vicki Wedemeyer by calling 712.249.6703 or emailing lwedem@hotmail.com.

