

THANK YOU NOTES

Stories of Connectional Giving

www.iaumc.org/tyn

Young Adult Council

The Young Adult Council of the Iowa Annual Conference works to support, encourage, and educate local churches and church leaders about effective ministry with and to young adults with the help of apportionment gifts from local churches.

Last March 29-30 the council sponsored a conversation with Earl Creps at the University of Northern Iowa Wesley Foundation in Cedar Falls. Dr. Creps, the author of the book Reverse Mentoring: How Young Leaders Can Transform Us and Why We Should Let Them, is a specialist on missional Christianity, postmodernism, communication, and leadership.

His book suggests that it is up to older adults to reach out to young people to establish relationships. Reverse mentoring simply invites older people to listen deeply to young people to learn from their experience so that both can grow.

In the introduction to his book, he writes, "Unlike their peers in the corporate world, for whom reverse mentoring appears to be a growing trend, Christian leaders seem much less inclined to treat the young as serious sources of information and insight. Barriers of some sort are blocking cooperation among the generations." But Creps encourages us, "If you have the openness of heart, the practices are not difficult at all."

THANK YOU NOTES

Stories of Connectional Giving

www.iaumc.org/tyn

Young Adult Council

The Young Adult Council of the Iowa Annual Conference works to support, encourage, and educate local churches and church leaders about effective ministry with and to young adults with the help of apportionment gifts from local churches.

Last March 29-30 the council sponsored a conversation with Earl Creps at the University of Northern Iowa Wesley Foundation in Cedar Falls. Dr. Creps, the author of the book Reverse Mentoring: How Young Leaders Can Transform Us and Why We Should Let Them, is a specialist on missional Christianity, postmodernism, communication, and leadership.

His book suggests that it is up to older adults to reach out to young people to establish relationships. Reverse mentoring simply invites older people to listen deeply to young people to learn from their experience so that both can grow.

In the introduction to his book, he writes, "Unlike their peers in the corporate world, for whom reverse mentoring appears to be a growing trend, Christian leaders seem much less inclined to treat the young as serious sources of information and insight. Barriers of some sort are blocking cooperation among the generations." But Creps encourages us, "If you have the openness of heart, the practices are not difficult at all."

