Experienced facilitators will guide you through the learning exchange.

Treyla Lee serves as a recruiter with Four Oaks in Sioux City and is head of her own consulting firm. She has many years of experience in program development, human resources, social services, management and marketing. She is a recognized leader in her community, serving as a member or board member in a number of organizations that impact child welfare. She is certified to counsel victims of domestic violence and substance abuse disorders within intimate partnerships and holds a BS in Early Childhood Education and Teaching and an MSE in Education, both from Wayne State College.

Jolene Holden works collaboratively with Iowa's Department of Human Services and other state and local partners in their efforts to promote race equity and inclusion. She is dedicated to reducing disproportionality and disparity to improve positive outcomes for children and families. Along with being a facilitator for Race: The Power of an Illusion learning exchanges, she is a member of the Cultural Equity Alliance Steering Committee and holds a MA in Clinical Psychology from Sam Houston State University.

Upon completion of the learning exchange, you will be able to:

- Understand how racial/ethnic disparities are manifest across a broad spectrum of child and family well-being indicators and the importance of having "courageous conversations" about race, equity, and child welfare.
- Explain how our institutions and courts used public policy and inconsistent logic to define race and give different racial and ethnic groups vastly unequal opportunities and access to life chances.
- Define the different levels of racism and understand how institutional and structural racism impact decisions, policies and practices in child welfare and the perpetuation of stereotypes about children and families of color.
- Utilize statistics from relevant data to create a clearer picture of disproportionality and disparity in Iowa.
- Identify how you can contribute to ensuring racially equitable treatment for children of color in Iowa's child welfare system.
